It's the fifth installment in the Finding Nemo franchise and the sequel to Finding Nemo (2003). It is directed by Andrew Stanton with a screenplay written by Stanton, Victoria Strouse, and Bob Peterson. The film revolves around the amnesiac blue tang fish named Dory, who journeys to be reunited with her parents. The film received praise from critics and audiences alike. It was the highest-grossing animated film of 2016, becoming the second Pixar film to reach this position (after 2010's Toy Story 3). Finding Dory was nominated for the Academy Award for Best Animated Feature and won the award for Best Original Song ("Find Yourself"), giving Stanton his first competitive Academy Award. In addition, Stanton won the Golden Globe for Best Animated Feature Film. In 3D, "Finding Dory" had a gross revenue of $1.11 billion from 4,310 theaters in its first week, making it the fifth highest-grossing film of all time behind "Transformers: Age of Extinction", "Jurassic World", "The Avengers", and "" (all three of which grossed over $1 billion worldwide). The film was noted for being a box office success, going on to become the second highest-grossing animated film in history behind only Toy Story 3.
